Foreword of the Director

The Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education (up until 2010 Agency for Adult Education) has been organising the Lifelong Learning Week since 2008, continuing an initiative initiated in 2002, when the Croatian Association for the Education of Adults organized the first Lifelong Learning Week in Croatia. In 2008 the Week was organized in only four cities (Zagreb, Vukovar, Gospić and Knin) and with only several activities. But even that first Week organized by the Agency aroused the interest of citizens and media for lifelong learning, especially the first Lifelong Learning Fair, which in the following years became a constitutional part of the Week. The concept of direct approach to citizens and information on the learning possibilities immediately proved to be a success so in the following Weeks the Lifelong Learning Fair always attracted many of those who wish to join the world of learning and education but don't know how or where. That exact goal – informing citizens on how to become a part of the lifelong learning process and motivating them to take that step – was the framework of all following Lifelong Learning Weeks. Every year the Week further developed, the scope of activities and areas of campaign expanded, the number of activities and involved institutions increased, the inclusion of crucial actors on all levels strengthened and, which is particularly important, the number of citizens who participated in various activities was constantly on the rise. In comparison to the initial four cities in 2008, in 2016 the Lifelong Learning Week was organized in all Croatian counties, in bigger cities, but also in smaller towns. The modest number of activities within the first Week organized by the Agency was the beginning of campaign which in 2016 comprised 600 events with more than 28 000 participants.

From the very beginning, the media recognized the importance of the campaign so in 2008 nearly 50 different media reported on the Lifelong Learning Week and its activities. However, by 2016, the interest of the media for promotion of learning and education and for the Lifelong Learning Week has soared so last year there were approximately 5000 reports in the media about our activities. That fact is very important because the presence of the campaign in the media on local and national levels ensures that the Week's main message – motivation of everyone, regardless of age and life circumstances, for learning – reaches even more citizens.

Since 2011, an award called Maslačak znanja, for accomplishments in adult learning, has been awarded within the Lifelong Learning Week.

That is one of the most important activities within the Week because it puts an individual who decided to expand his/her skills and knowledge, who works on his/her development and who had to overcome many obstacles, at the forefront. As a result of their determination and perseverance, the winners of the Maslačak znanja achieved many positive changes in their lives. For that reason, it is clear why the recognition of their efforts and emphasising of their examples (which in the best possible way demonstrate why learning is valuable) are some the Week's activities we are particularly proud of.

Already in 2008 it was proven that successful implementation of this campaign is possible only in cooperation with other institutions and organizations, so the number of partners grew each year, and the cooperation deepened. Regional coordinators have been the Agency's main partners in organization of the Lifelong Learning Week since 2011. They are adult education institutions which create and carry out activities together with the Agency, and on local and regional levels motivate institutions to join the promotion of learning and inform the citizens of learning possibilities in their area. Without the cooperation and support from them and other partners who participated in the Lifelong Learning Week, the campaign never would have been able to achieve what it achieved since 2008 until today.

What is certainly worth mentioning is the fact that since 2016 the educational campaign Lifelong Learning Week is financed from the European Social Fund through a three-year project Promotion of Lifelong Learning, in the total amount of 11.508.270,12 kn, with the purpose of raising awareness of the importance of lifelong learning and increasing the participation of adults in lifelong learning processes, to strengthen their competitiveness on national and local levels.

Presentation of results achieved within the Lifelong Learning Week was one of the main motives for making this brochure, which now counts six editions. We wanted to present activities carried out within this campaign in recent years, its most important achievements, as well as those who helped with its successful implementation. I hope that the described results will be an incentive for all of us to continue to develop and improve the Lifelong Learning Week, as the most important educational campaign which speaks to all citizens of the Republic of Croatia in the years to come. I also hope that in the future we will continue to work on raising awareness of the importance of learning throughout the whole life.

Introduction

Nowadays, the society is strongly influenced by globalization which carries a number of challenges that require new knowledge and skills in order to be able to respond to them adequately. Education and learning are not, nor can they be, exempt from these processes. New processes affect the very dynamics and adjustment of the overall society and, thus, the area of daily activities of all stakeholders in the educational system, of the society and the individual. Education and educational systems are, due to their role, the areas that may be the slowest to adapt to changes and most cautiously respond to the challenges presented before them by the modern society. Therefore, for all these reasons mentioned, the need for long-term planning arises to promptly give quality answers to fulfil their roles and set goals.

As already mentioned, education must not remain a silent observer in global processes. Today, one of the main components of all strategic plans is a marketing- promotion plan, whether being adopted at the European, national, regional or the level of the educational institution itself. All educational institutions, at times of globalization and rapid changes that they are accompanied with, should use the opportunities provided by marketing and marketing tools.

Bearing in mind the statistical data that the population of the Republic of Croatia is insufficiently included in the process of lifelong learning and education, it is necessary to direct and continuously undertake various promotional activities to raise the awareness of the importance of education and learning to a higher level in every individual.

On the basis of the Strategy for Adult Education in the Republic of Croatia (adopted in 2004) and key guidelines of developmental policies of the European Union, and especially the latest European document Strategies for Improving Participation in and Raising Awareness of Adult Learning (2012), which speak about the importance of promoting learning and education, and with the support of the Ministry of Science, Education and Sports (MSES), the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education (hereinafter referred to as the Agency) has organized and carried out nine (out of totally ten) campaigns called the Lifelong Learning Week (hereinafter the Week), promoting (also in this way) the learning culture in the Republic of Croatia.

Alongside the need to raise awareness of the importance of investing into lifelong learning, acquisition of qualifications necessary for self-realization, increase of the quality of life, improvement in the educational structure of the population, permanent modernization of the content and methods of education at all educational levels, it is also important to raise awareness of the constant care of the carriers of the educational system and all stakeholders of the aforementioned activity.

Therefore, the Week is certainly an excellent way to respond to the challenges of the modern society and to encourage the citizens of the Republic of Croatia to engage and daily acquire the values of the learning culture throughout their lifetime.

The most important achievement of the campaign is based on the fact that the activities are carried out in all parts of the country, which aims at and contributes to the realization of the goal of equal development of all parts of the Republic of Croatia.

It is important to emphasize that the organization of the Week and its results would be almost impossible to achieve without the cooperation with partners from the public, civil and business sectors which are carriers of these activities in all parts of the Republic of Croatia. Institutions for adult education, which are, year after year, becoming the carriers of activities and assume responsibility in their surroundings and environment, have a particularly important role in the development and improvement of the Week.

The Agency has also recognized the importance of marking the International Literacy Day (8 September) which has been marked seven times in the organization of the Agency.

For all mentioned reasons, it is necessary to permanently promote learning and education so that every individual – by acquiring new knowledge and skills – could ensure greater competitiveness on the labour market, long-term employment and a more active participation in everyday social life for him/herself.

What is lifelong learning?

All learning activity undertaken throughout life, with the aim of improving knowledge, skills and competences within a personal, civic, social and/or employment-related perspective.

(COMMISSION OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES, 2001., Making a European Area of Lifelong Learning a Reality)

The concept of lifelong learning is an idea of systematization of learning in all stages of life (from early childhood to old age) and in all forms in which it is undertaken (formal, non-formal and informal). Learning is a continuous process in which the results and person's motivation for learning in a certain period of life depend on the knowledge, habits and learning experiences acquired at a previous age. The concept of lifelong learning mostly relates to objectives of economic nature, for example improved competitiveness and long-term employability. On the other side, equally important objectives that contribute to the active role of individuals in the society must not be ignored. Those goals are encouragement of social inclusion, development of active citizenship and development of individual potentials.

The term lifelong learning is often replaced by the term lifelong education, although the two terms are not synonymous. Education only includes organized learning, while learning is a wider concept which includes unintentional, unorganized and spontaneous acquisition of knowledge that can be carried out for a lifetime.

FORMS OF LEARNING:

Lifelong learning includes the learning that takes place within formal and non-formal education and informal learning.

1. Formal education - education carried out in various accredited educational institutions per approved programs for the purpose of improving the knowledge, skills and competences for personal, social and professional needs, which leads to recognized diplomas and qualifications. It is most commonly implemented as structurally, chronologically specific full-time education of young people (as a rule, between 5 and 25 years of age) in primary and secondary schools, universities and specialized programs of regular vocational and higher education. In addition, it also includes formal adult education - formally structured and sequentially organized adult education which leads to an acquisition of a formal certificate.
2. Non-formal education - any form of education that does not lead to an acquisition of new qualifications, new diplomas or a progress in the qualification ranking. It indicates organized learning processes aimed at training adults for work, various social activities and personal development.
3. Informal learning - learning that results from daily activities related to work, family or leisure. It is not organized or structured in terms of learning objectives, time or support. Informal learning is in most cases unintentional from the perspective of the learner.

Lifelong Learning Week

Lifelong Learning Week is a UNESCO's initiative launched in 1999 which is celebrated every year in numerous countries on all continents in order to sensitize the public to lifelong learning, promote the learning culture and encourage personal motivation.

Apart from the need to raise an individual's awareness of the importance of investing into lifelong learning and acquisition of qualifications necessary for self-realization, increase of the quality of life, improvement in the educational structure of the population, permanent modernization of the content and methods of education at all educational levels, it is also important to raise awareness of the constant care of the carriers of the educational system and all its stakeholders.

Lifelong Learning Week in Croatia

The Lifelong Learning Week is a national educational campaign which, in a simple way, directly addressing the citizens, encourages the realization of the notion of promoting learning and education, and develops learning culture.

The Agency has, in collaboration with partners, in all parts of the Republic of Croatia, developed a campaign with events which will enable citizens to acquire greater knowledge of the possibilities of education and learning.

When we speak of the Week in the context of marketing planning, hybrid classic marketing planning is applied. This type of planning is based on modern generic theoretical approaches, current and applicable in most modern institutions in the field of education.

The Agency has developed a campaign organization and implementation model characteristic for Croatia. The model consists of five key points – situation analysis, goal definition, plan development, implementation and control of achieved results.

Contribution and support to the implementation of the Week have been provided by the following institutions: the Government of the Republic of Croatia, the President of the Republic of Croatia, MSES, Council for Adult Education, Croatian Employers' Association, Croatian Chamber of Economy, Croatian Chamber of Trades and Crafts, National Foundation for Civil Society Development, Croatian Education and Teacher Training Agency, Agency for Science and Higher Education, Agency for Mobility and EU Programs, Croatian Employment Service, Croatian Academic Society, Croatian Association for the Education of Adults, Association of Institutions for Adult Education, Union of Independent Syndicates of Croatia, Council for the Development of Civil Society, Office for Cooperation with NGOs, City and County Offices for Education, Faculty of Teacher Education in Zagreb, Croatian Pedagogical Society, Croatian Reading Association, Croatian Association of Secondary School Principals, Croatian Association of Primary School Principals, Association for Lifelong Learning.

Between 26 September and 2 October 2016, the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education organized the tenth, jubilee Lifelong Learning Week, a national educational campaign. The campaign, whose aim is to raise awareness of the importance of lifelong learning, was held under the auspices of the President of the Republic of Croatia, Kolinda Grabar Kitarović, and with support of the Ministry of Science, Education and Sports.

All Croatian counties again participated in the campaign, which in a direct, oftentimes informal way, conveys the message of the importance of education and learning. Institutions organized and carried out their activities in cooperation with their partners – public authorities, social partners, the Croatian Employment Service, counties, local community, associations, cultural institutions, institutions for adult education, schools etc. 700 different institutions held more than 660 events aimed at promotion of education and learning, such as workshops, lectures, round tables, theatrical performances, exhibitions etc. The fact that the Lifelong Learning Week 2015 comprised 540 events speaks volumes of the campaign's rising success.

The media had a particularly important role in the implementation of the Week. Without their involvement and support it would not be possible to reach the target audiences. In terms of promotional and media activities, the achieved results

It is necessary to emphasise that promotion and raising awareness of the importance of lifelong learning are highlighted as priorities in all strategic documents relating to development of education in the Republic of Croatia as well as on the European Union level. The European dimension of the Lifelong Learning Week 2016 was particularly emphasised because the campaign was carried out under the three-year project Promotion of Lifelong Learning, whose total value is 11.508.270,12 kn and which is financed by the European Social Fund.

THE OPENING CEREMONY

The campaign activities began with the official opening ceremony on 26 September in the National and University Library in Zagreb.

After the introductory words of regional coordinators (via video message) and Mile Živčić, the Director of the Agency, in which he referred to lifelong learning as a necessary prerequisite for functioning in the modern world, Predrag Šustar, PhD, the Minister of Science, Education and Sports said a few words to the attendees.

Mario Vučić, Assistant Director of the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education and campaign manager briefly described the development of the national campaign in the past ten years. During that time, the inclusion of regional partners and association with numerous local institutions, such as the Croatian Employment Service's regional offices and local centres for information and consulting on career, primary and secondary schools, kindergartens, faculties, nongovernmental organizations, museums and libraries significantly enriched the programs and involved an increasing number of citizens in the world of lifelong learning.

The Choir of the Pavao Markovac Music School was responsible for the musical part of the opening ceremony. The ceremony was followed by an international professional-scientific conference organized by the Agency for Vocational Education

THE “MASLAČAK ZNANJA” AWARD

One of the most important activities traditionally carried out within the Lifelong Learning Week is the presentation of the “Maslačak znanja” award for outstanding accomplishments in adult education.

This year’s winners are Marjeta Trkman Kravar, Neven Oršuš and Mirjana Reštigorac – with their real-life examples they witness that only sky is the limit with learning.

They are individuals who decided to expand their knowledge and skills and work on their personal development. In doing so they had to overcome many obstacles, but the result of their determination and perseverance is that they managed to achieve many positive changes in their lives. This year’s “Maslačak znanja” awards were presented to the winners during the opening ceremony, when each winner received a voucher in the amount of 3 000 kn which they can use to attend an educational program of their own choice.

It has been proven that personal examples of individuals who opted for education despite unfavourable conditions and an environment which isn’t always encouraging, motivate others to follow their lead.

MARJETA TRKMAN KRAVAR (58) is a schoolteacher and a tourist guide specialized for working with persons with disability. She participated as a volunteer in the Cook Look project of the Association of Teachers in Gastronomy Education, in Zagreb, between July 2015 and March 2016. The project was supported by the Croatian Ministry of Tourism. She is an honorary member of the Slovenian Professional Tourist Guide Club and upon their invitation she participated at the training for beekeeping tourist guide of the Slovenian Beekeepers’

Association. She organizes many field exercises in Croatia. She is known for her persistence, flexibility and communication and negotiation abilities. She constantly attends additional education and training, various workshops and courses, to acquire additional knowledge and efficiently perform her job. She is also active as a volunteer in the Maksimir Retirement Home and the Association for Promotion of Equal Opportunities.

NEVEN ORŠUŠ (20) started primary school at the age of ten, but due to life circumstances, he didn't finish it within the regular system. Willing to learn and eager to create a better life for himself, he joined primary adult education at the Koprivnica Open University, with the aim of finishing primary school, which he successfully achieved in 2012. In 2015 through the Croatian Employment Service he was given an opportunity to join a training program for a façade worker, which he was very interested in. Despite the fact that he was the youngest attendant of the training program, with his attitude and approach to education, he became the "driver" of the whole group and other attendants named him "the group president". Encouraged by his example, all attendants arrived to classes half an hour earlier to repeat the lessons from the previous day, to learn new contents more easily. Two employers noticed him during practical training and soon offered him a job. Shortly after the end of the training program he started working for one them.

MIRJANA REŠTIGORAC (48) had no opportunity to continue her education after finishing primary school. For about ten years she worked as an assistant worker in a restaurant kitchen, but after the company she worked for closed doors she was left jobless. In early 2002 she started working as an administrative assistant in a dental office. In 2006 she enrolled >> >> in a six-month nursing course at the Public Open University Zagreb. While learning anatomy, physiology, healthcare and other professional subjects, she realised how much that new knowledge helped her in her daily job activities. This evoked a desire for additional training in that field so in 2014, at the suggestion of and with the support from her family and employer, she enrolled into a retraining program for a dental assistant at the Ambitio College – an institution for adult education. During the course of this two-year program, she successfully acquired new knowledge but also expanded her views and opportunities. After her work colleague retired, she was employed in the position of a dental assistant. The benefits she received from additional education and training did not affect just her self-esteem but they also increased her standard of living.

REGIONAL COORDINATORS

During the campaign, in all parts of Croatia, through all kinds of activities and in many creative ways, the learning culture was promoted with the help of many stakeholders and carriers of the education system. Regional coordinators play an important role in these activities, because from year to year they motivate citizens and institutions on local and regional levels.

It has been proven that personal examples of individuals who opted for education despite unfavourable conditions and an environment which isn't always encouraging, motivate others to follow their lead

NATIONAL PROMOTORS OF LIFELONG LEARNING

Public persons, such as Croatian Olympic athletes Ivica Kostelić and Gordan Kožulj, the European Karate champion Maša Martinović and television host Blaženka Leib, who were also promoters of the 10th Lifelong Learning Week, provided help and support in the implementation of the campaign. With their messages, which were well received by the public, and their life examples, they pointed out the importance of lifelong learning and investment in oneself.

LIFELONG LEARNING FAIR

This year's Week was successfully finished with the Lifelong Learning Fair, held on 30 September on Petar Preradović Square in Zagreb. The Fair was opened by Mila Jelavić, Deputy Head of the City Office for Education, Culture and Sports and Mile Živčić, Director of the Agency. By presenting their programs, many adult education institutions showed how to increase the quality of life, develop skills and competences and become more competitive on the labour market. They also offered interesting vouchers for free education programs.

Several activities associated with promotion of the EPALE platform were held under the Lifelong Learning Week; on 28 September 2016 in Vinkovci and 3 October in Koprivnica.

The ninth Lifelong Learning Week in the Republic of Croatia was held between 28 September and 4 October 2015. The Week comprised 540 events in which 700 different institutions participated. The events were organized throughout the Republic of Croatia, in all counties, in bigger cities as well as smaller towns. Thusly, the intention to reach all citizens, regardless of where they live, and convey the message of the importance of lifelong learning, was achieved.

The main carriers of the campaign, organizations and institutions that joined the Week by organizing some of the events, were again numerous adult education institutions, primary and secondary schools, kindergartens, faculties, nongovernmental organization, museums, libraries, companies and many others. Many events were organized by the Croatian Employment Service local offices as well as local Centres for information and consulting on career. It is estimated that around 28 000 citizens participated in some of the activities under Week 2015, with all age groups being represented, from kindergarten children to our most senior citizens. As in previous years, the organizers made an effort to create events which will informally convey the message of the importance and benefits of lifelong learning, and show that learning and fun needn't necessarily exclude one another.

Different workshops were organized within the Week – creative recycling, computer literacy and resume writing workshops, among others. Many lectures were also held, dedicated to a wide range of topics, from Croatian history to vegetarian nutrition. The round tables organized within the Week were often oriented to subjects related to learning and education and they tried to gather as many actors associated with that field as possible, from those coming from the economy, to those coming from the scientific community. Many educational institutions organized “open door days” and used the Lifelong Learning Week to introduce citizens to their work and the possibilities they offer. Lifelong learning fairs were organized in several cities, where educational institutions also presented their programs.

Exhibitions, theatrical performances, martial arts demonstrations, quizzes, poetry evenings, film projections and may other events were organized within the Week. It is impossible to list all activities the organizers carried out, but there is no doubt that it was exactly their effort which managed to raise awareness of the importance of lifelong learning among the citizens, and motivate them to have the courage to join the world of lifelong learning.

THE OPENING CEREMONY

The Lifelong Learning Week 2015 was officially opened on 28 September in Rijeka city hall. More than 120 participants were present at the ceremony which was hosted by journalist Vladimir Rončević. Vojko Obersnel, the mayor of Rijeka, Edita Stilin, the Head of the Administrative Department of Education of Primorje-Gorski Kotar County and Mile Živčić, the Director of the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education spoke a few words to the attendees in the first part of the program. >> the Week was opened by his assistant Tanja Djaković. All orators emphasised the importance of promotion of lifelong learning and mentioned the measures and activities implemented for that purpose on all levels; local, regional and national, where the Lifelong Learning Week is one of the most important activities in the promotion of learning and education. Regional coordinators said a few words to the attendees via video messages. Each regional coordinator prepared a short video which, among other things, presented the activities which will take place within the Week in the counties they were responsible for. The campaign's focus on the citizens, participants of lifelong learning, was also reflected in the shown videos so the attendees were able to find out more not just about the events held within the Week, but also about how citizens see lifelong learning and why it is important to them.

In the second part of the program the citizens, participants of lifelong learning, were again in the main focus because the tradition of giving the Maslačak znanja award for accomplishments in adult education in the opening ceremony was continued. Before the awards were presented to the winner, the attendees had the chance to learn more about the winners via a short video in which the winners told their life stories, especially their accomplishments in learning, and pointed out the positive changes the learning has brought to them. Natko Štiglić, a student of the Ivan Matetić Ronjgov Music School from Rijeka and the Choir of Pensioners of the city of Rijeka performed musical acts at the end of the ceremony.

>> THE “MASLAČAK ZNANJA” AWARD

The Maslačak znanja award for accomplishments in adult education has been awarded within the Lifelong Learning Week for several years, so it became one of its most important and most recognizable components. It has been proven that personal examples of individuals who opted for education despite unfavourable conditions and an environment which isn't always encouraging, motivate others to follow their lead. Many stories of such individuals who decided to get additional education at an adult age arrived to the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education in the past year. That is why all candidates deserve praises for their efforts and determination. However, the life stories and accomplishments of three candidates stood out, so they were declared the winners of the Maslačak znanja award for 2015. They are Andreja Sedlar, Ivica Cik and Sandra Pezić – their stories are not the same, every one of them faced different challenges, and their learning paths also differ. However, the thing they all have in common is the fact that learning changed their lives for the better.

NATIONAL PROMOTOR OF LIFELONG LEARNING

The promotor of lifelong learning for 2015 was entrepreneur Mate Rimac, who emphasised the following in his message on the importance of learning:

“ Learning means daily advancement. We are primarily guided by the desire to know more and the love for this work; making high performance electric cars. When you do what you love, you don't work a single day in your life – you play and create excellence. Education serves as an upgrade, you follow it because you want to, not because someone imposes it on you.

In our field the technology advances quickly. To be competitive, you have to be at the source, not just keep up, but always be one step ahead, make new trends. That means being the best at what you do. You can be the best only if you learn every day. That way you create time for the research of new technologies, the things no one else has done before.

That's the sweetest part of the work! ”

Her professional and working qualities were recognized very quickly and she was allowed to enrol in the Nursing College at the Faculty of Medicine in Osijek (1986), which she successfully completed in due time and gained the professional title of a chief nursing officer. Due to family reasons she moved to Zadar in 1989. She started working at Zemunik Psychiatric Hospital as the ward sister of the acute medical department. She spent the war years in Zadar General Hospital at the Department of Surgery, where she demonstrated exceptional expertise in the care of the wounded and the organization, so in 1996 she became the head nurse of the Department of Surgery, Zadar General Hospital. In her work she, as a responsible person, encourages systematic education of her employees, and her own too. Due to her expertise and the way she transfers knowledge, she began working as a professional teacher in Medical School A. Kuzmanić Zadar in 2003.

- In 2001 the winner of the "White Heart" award for her contributions to nursing
- In 2003 she attended and finished Supplementary Pedagogical-Psychological Education at the University of Zadar. Her need for learning and acquiring new knowledge does not end here and she continues with the acquisition of new knowledge
- In 2007 she attended and finished ECDEL education- in the organization of the MSES of the Republic of Croatia

The nominator of the candidate stated: "When we decided to nominate Ms Verica Elvedi for the "Maslačak znanja" award we had no idea that behind her modesty and the data she had provided hides much more - and that's great love towards learning - and sharing her knowledge generously with her students. It is from her students and colleagues at the Medical school A. Kuzmanic Zadar that we have learned that she is the driving force and an active participant and coordinator of numerous projects, such as international project "E-Medica" in which she actively works on involving students and colleagues in team work and acquiring new knowledge."

VID ORŠUŠ – Koprivnica (Nominated by - POU Koprivnica)

Difficult social conditions in the family with six children led to the fact that Vid had already left full-time education in his first grade and at the age of eleven he was looking for jobs as a wage worker on family farms. Long-term unemployment and living on social welfare, which are, in the year-long economic recession of the whole society, a reality for a growing number of citizens, as well as the desire for better life and learning, were the best motives for, now thirty-one-year-old Vid, to regularly attend classes at Public Open University Koprivnica and successfully complete all six training periods in the program of primary adult education. Vid came to classes by bicycle from a six-mile-distant Roma settlement Žlebece and during the school years he achieved such good cooperation with teachers and fellow students so that today, he says, he is especially grateful to his teachers who, seeing that he did not "only" wish to get a certificate, recognized his potential and desire for knowledge and regularly asked more of him. Therefore, Vid's great desire is to continue his education and train for an assistant chef. With his perspective that education is the right path for improving the quality of life, Vid, by setting an example, acts in his environment, encourages those that have found themselves in a similar situation to return to school and motivates children never to give up, especially aware of the everyday difficulties in the integration and job search the Roma who don't speak fluent Croatian are faced with. The circle of positive impact is still expanding, his support was one of the earlier winners of the "Maslačak znanja" award - Ljiljana Car, so he has also encouraged his sister to finish primary school.

NATIONAL PROMOTERS OF LIFELONG LEARNING

In order to enhance the activities of lifelong learning and ensure that the message about the importance of learning and education reaches the highest possible number of citizens, the role of the promoter of lifelong learning was established in 2013. The aim to achieve is the involvement of famous individuals in the activities of promotion of lifelong learning, who by serving as role models and on the basis of their own experience may indicate the need for learning throughout life. This year, the Lifelong Learning Week was joined by a number of persons from the public life, giving support to this educational campaign. The message about the importance of lifelong learning was given by Ivica Kostelić, Goran Bogdan, Danijela Trbović, Blaženka Leib, Davor Pavuna, Martina Tomčić and Slaven Knezović.

LIFELONG LEARNING FAIR

Organized by the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education on 3 October 2014 at Petar Preradović Square in Zagreb, the Lifelong Learning Fair was held within which the adult educational institutions presented their offer of educational programs and provided information about the opportunities for education and learning in the City of Zagreb. The fair has provided citizens with an opportunity to learn in detail about the programs carried out by individual institutions. However, not only that the Lifelong Learning Week is designed as a campaign in which citizens are given the message about the importance of learning in a direct and often informal way, but at the same time this fair also represents yet another way of motivating citizens to education and learning, or getting involved in the lifelong learning process. In addition to providing information to interested citizens, each of the institutions that took part in the Lifelong Learning Fair enabled one of the fair visitors to attend an adult educational program for free.

PRESENTATION OF THE NEW STRATEGY OF EDUCATION, SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

A new Strategy of Education, Science and Technology was presented after the opening ceremony of the Lifelong Learning Week. The strategy was, with an emphasis on lifelong learning and education of adults, presented by professor Neven Budak, Ph.D. the president of the National Operating Authority for the development of the Strategy of Education, Science and Technology, and professor Tomislav Filetin, PhD, the Head of the working group for lifelong learning and education of adults.

REGIONAL COORDINATORS

Taking into account the importance of the role of regional coordinators, institutions for adult education which are responsible for the tasks of coordinating and organizing activities as well as providing information in their regions, and good experience in the implementation of the Week 2011 and 2012, this year their cooperation and involvement in the implementation of the activities of Week 2013 has also continued. A total of eight regional coordinators were engaged, which meant a change of coordinators for Sisak-Moslavina, Virovitica-Podravina and Bjelovar-Bilogora Counties. The role of coordinators for these counties was taken over by the Public Open University Algebra (a subsidiary of Bjelovar). In particular, as an especially modern and extremely successful approach to and a model for conducting a campaign at local and regional levels proved to be the one carried out by Public Open University Koprivnica under the leadership of Josip Nakić-Alfirević.

National promoter of lifelong learning
Gordan Kožulj

“ The principal difference between sports and other social activities is that sports is based solely on the concept of competition. In these circumstances, I have learned that one should always think about how to stay competitive.

Sports has given me a clear message to this question - to be competitive means to always work on oneself. I realized that the acquisition of new skills and knowledge should not be limited neither to the period of growing up, nor the framework of physical space (e.g. classrooms, clubs). The potential that we have can be fully realized only if we open ourselves to the world and its infinite opportunities. This is achieved by embracing a life-style called lifelong learning. It is the process of creating a lasting value that enhances all aspects of life of individuals, and thus the society as a whole. In a nutshell, lifelong learning is the basis for personal development, the basis for active participation in the development of society, and, as I have pointed out in particular, a platform for creation of sustainable competitiveness.

2011 she acquired the CQ Trainer Certificate and she passes on her knowledge, formally and informally, to the people surrounding her. She also organizes educational courses for her colleagues and encourages them to educate permanently.

NATIONAL PROMOTERS OF LIFELONG LEARNING

To enhance the activities of promotion of lifelong learning and ensure that the message about the importance of learning and education reaches as many citizens as possible, the role of a promoter of lifelong learning was established in 2013. The goal is to include well-known individuals in the promotion of lifelong learning activities, who by setting an example themselves and on the basis of their own experience can point to the need for learning throughout life. By signing a contract for the purposes of cooperation and implementation of joint activities relating to promotion of lifelong learning in the Republic of Croatia through the national campaign the Lifelong Learning Week, Gordan Kožulj became the national lifelong learning promoter for 2013. Gordan Kožulj is a Croatian Olympic athlete, World and European swimming champion who, through his personal example has clearly shown to what extent education is important. In his speech at the Week opening ceremony Gordan Kožulj emphasized the fact that it was precisely experience that he had acquired during his sports career that showed him the importance of continuous improvement, working on oneself and openness towards the opportunities of lifelong learning.

In this way, the network of coordinators continued to strengthen in order to enhance promotion at regional and local level throughout the Republic of Croatia and this significantly contributed to the geographical and thematic distribution of the implementation of activities of the Week. Regional coordinators encouraged institutions in their areas (institutions, associations, the local community, the county and others from all fields of activity) to get involved and implement the activities within the campaign.

Week 2011 set a record in the number of participants, programs, events and visitors in comparison with the last three years, and the most important fact is that a series of events was organized in each county.

Week 2011 was characterized by the introduction of new activities necessary for long-term development of the campaign and for the improvement of the existing ones. The creation and the implementation of two new activities were especially important: the establishment of a network of regional coordinators and the “Maslačak znanja” award ceremony for achievements in adult education. Furthermore, the modernization of the site www.cjelozivotno-ucenje.hr was also of great importance, which was successfully implemented in the framework of the IPA Regional Network of Local Learning Institutions. On this occasion, 10 adult learning institutions from areas of special state concern received grants for the implementation of activities in the framework of the Week. The new long-term visual identity of the Week was designed, and the agreement on cooperation in its implementation was signed with the Croatian Employment Service.

The opening ceremony took place at the National and University Library in Zagreb which was one of the organizers of the event.

The Week was opened by Radovan Fuchs, PhD, the Minister of Science, Education and Sports.

The general objective of the Week 2011 was to point to the diversity of lifelong learning and the great number of forms and methods of its realisation.

In accordance with the main objective, the campaign was especially focused at three specific objectives:

1. to familiarize the public and individuals with the different possibilities of acquiring competences through lifelong learning processes (e.g. formal education, participation in seminars, courses, training in the workplace, learning through experience, etc.);

2. to raise the awareness of employers about the importance of their continuous investment in learning and training of their employees, including training in the workplace, as well as possibilities of acquiring the relevant competences outside the formal education system;

3. to encourage institutions of the education system to evaluate and recognize the competences acquired outside the formal education system.

Once again, one of the most important partners in the implementation of the Week was the media. Without their participation it would not be possible to reach the target groups. In terms of promotional and media activities, this year was marked by exceptional results. During the implementation of Week 2011 there were more than 3 000 media announcements.

>> 2010 the need to establish a network of regional coordinators arose, mainly due to two main reasons:

1. the need for motivation and inclusion of smaller towns and less developed areas in the activities of the Week;
2. improved and more effective communication with the implementers of activities at regional and local level.

This year the Agency chose six regional coordinators who connected the potential implementers of activities in their region with the national coordinators of the Week.

The primary objective was to develop a network of implementers and to implement promotional activities across the Republic of Croatia. The geographic and thematic distribution of the Week would thus be significantly improved.

>> ABOUT THE AWARD WINNERS:

LJILJANA CAR

As a member of the Roma ethnic minority she graduated from high school and in her community, she actively promotes the importance of education for Roma population.

She is included in the program of Public Open University Koprivnica as a Roma assistant, where she helps to those who have a lack of education which poses a major barrier to inclusion in society. Her position is that the key to improving the situation of the Roma today lies in schooling that enables overcoming the Croatian language, easier socialization and access to the institutions and the labour market.

The story of Ljiljana Car is inspiring to all those who are aware of the importance of lifelong learning as well as to those who need to raise the awareness that education can contribute to their greater social inclusion, which is particularly important for the Roma community.

STJEPAN CIPEK

Mr. Stjepan Cipek, a pedagogy and psychology teacher, shows what it means to live according to the principle of lifelong learning with his own example. Despite being at the end of his eighth decade (he is 78) he is preparing a master thesis. Stjepan Cipek excelled at the University of the Third Age, at Public Open University Zagreb, not only as a participant of a number of educational programs but also as a person who teaches at the same time.

During his working life he worked as a teacher, publishing more than 40 papers in the fields of pedagogy and psychology, participated in a number of vocational training courses and led workshops and seminars himself. Five years ago he became a student at the University of the Third Age and actively participates in extracurricular activities. His example shows to all that by going to retirement one does not stop living, and that learning and education can be a good way of participation of the elderly in active social life.

ZVJEZDANA RONČEVIĆ

Due to poor social conditions Ms Zvezdana Rončević did not manage to finish high school but got employed after elementary school. She married young and gave birth to twins. As in the meantime she lost her job, in 2008, at the age of 47, she decided to enrol in a high school program at the Public Open University As Zadar, which she finished in 2011.

In spite of difficult social circumstances and family tragedies, Zvezdana Rončević decided (and managed) to finish high school when she was middle-aged. People who drop out of the regular education system in many cases are not motivated for continuing education, so the example of Ms. Rončević is especially encouraging for people who have similar life circumstances.

LIFELONG LEARNING FAIR

This year the Agency organized the fourth Lifelong Learning Fair, which marked the end of this year's Week. The Fair took place on 15 September at Ban Jelačić Square. At the Fair, adult education institutions, schools and various organizations offered citizens information on education and learning opportunities in the City of Zagreb and Zagreb County, as well as on various types of their education programs. The objective of the Agency was to attract more citizens to the Fair in order to motivate them to engage in some form of learning. During the Fair each institution (which had its own stall) gave one visitor a substantial discount or free attendance of one of its education programs.

During the implementation of the Week 2011 there were more than 3000 media announcements.

Lifelong Learning Week was for the first time organized in Croatia from 13 to 20 May 2002, which enabled Croatia to join the circle of numerous countries that by organizing the Week confirmed their understanding of the importance of lifelong learning, or creating a “learning society”.

The idea of organizing the Lifelong Learning Week had already existed, but the cooperation between the Croatian community of open universities with the Institute for International Cooperation of the German Adult Education Association within the project “Strengthening local and regional structures of adult education as a contribution to stability in Southeast Europe - the Stability Pact” certainly contributed to its achievement.

The Lifelong Learning Week was held under the auspices of Croatian President Stjepan Mesić.

INSTITUTIONS AND ACTIVITIES

Nine open universities responded to the invitation of the Croatian Association for the Education of Adults - in Daruvar, Koprivnica, Kutina, Novska, Ozalj, Pula, Šibenik, Velika Gorica and Zagreb, therefore, the Week was held in all regions of Croatia.

In accordance with UNESCO’s Guide for Organizing and taking into account past achievements in the Republic of Croatia in the field of lifelong learning, the Lifelong Learning Week 2002 was focused on:

International Literacy Day

International Literacy Day 2014; a Round Table Discussion on “Lifelong Learning in a Virtual Environment”

International Literacy Day is UNESCO's initiative, which each year aims to remind the international community of the status of literacy and adult education globally. The idea of celebrating this day appeared in September 1965 in Tehran, at the World Conference of Ministers of Education on the Eradication of Illiteracy. At the conference an initiative was presented to declare one day in the year as the International Literacy Day, in order to mark but also to warn of the importance of literacy at the international level. 8 September was chosen as the day to celebrate it and UNESCO already began marking the International Literacy Day in 1966.

The Agency has recognized the importance of celebrating the International Literacy Day and the Week traditionally begins with a forum held for the specific occasion.

In the organization of the Agency the International Literacy Day has been marked seven times so far: in 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015 and 2016.

INTERNATIONAL LITERACY DAY 2016

Adult literacy training is one of the most important areas of adult education, but also the area that sets the number-not challenges for everyone involved in its implementation. Adult educators, teachers, and all other professionals who work in this area are often faced with a lack of appropriate materials and contents related to literacy and adult literacy training. On the occasion of the International Literacy Day the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education drew attention to the contents related to these topics at the EPAL - European Electronic Platform for Adult Learning through a media release.

EPAL is the new multilingual community of professionals in adult learning. Its aim is to improve the quality and methods of providing services of adult learning in Europe, the establishment of a strong Pan-European sector of adult learning and enabling experts in the field of adult education to reach out to all adults. EPAL is an initiative of the Directorate-General for Education and Culture of the European Commission, which advocates that EPAL becomes a permanent functionality of the European area of adult learning. EPAL is supervised by the Education, Audiovisual and Culture Executive Agency, and its everyday work is managed by the Central Support Service. EPAL is designed specifically for teachers in adult education, researchers, members of the academic community, policy makers and professionals working in the field of adult learning throughout Europe. The purpose of the e-platform EPALE is that adult learners are the ultimate beneficiaries of development in the field of adult learning, whether in a formal or an informal setting. However, this platform is intended for those who carry out and organize adult education, rather than the attendees themselves.

The prevailing notion is that literacy has not one, but multiple dimensions (e.g. reading, documentation and numerical literacy), which may not be equally developed. Also, in addition to general literacy, there is also a variety of other kinds of literacy - IT, mathematical, scientific, methodological, environmental, etc.

Special attention was given to one of those “specific” types of literacy – financial – at the EPALE platform this year. Financial literacy is a set of skills necessary for the proper understanding and interpretation of financial information for making good financial decisions. This is a vital skill that gives people the ability to make informed decisions when it comes to their money. Good financial literacy means that people are able to make better decisions when it comes to saving for their own studies and pensions or choosing the right mortgage plan for their home. EPALE’s national services from all European countries have invested joint efforts to allow users a variety of content related to the topic of financial literacy in several European languages, and the platform contains reports, strategies and materials related specifically to the development of financial literacy.

By marking the International Literacy Day, the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education encouraged the users to become members of the EPALE platform and to join the largest community of professionals in adult education in Europe.

INTERNATIONAL LITERACY DAY 2015

The Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education marked the International Literacy Day 2015 with a media announcement with the aim of pointing to the importance of literacy at the global level. but in our country, too. Continuous development of the notion of literacy from the initial marking of the International

Literacy Day in the 1960s until today has resulted in the understanding of literacy which includes more than just reading and writing. The announcement stated the view of UNESCO, >> >> an international organization which makes great efforts in terms of literacy and literacy training, which says that literacy is an absolutely necessary precondition of social and personal development with a potential to transform the lives of people that cannot be overestimated.

The International Literacy Day was also an opportunity to review the situation in Croatia. Data from the last census show that today in Croatia there is less than one percent of illiterate people older than 10. However, this is mostly about reading and writing skills, and each person that can read and write a short simple essay on their everyday life is considered to be literate, regardless of the language or script. If we consider the situation in view of IT literacy, the data from the last census show that in some dimensions of this type of literacy 40% of the citizens of the Republic of Croatia is considered illiterate.

The communication of the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education on the occasion of the International Literacy Days ends with the invitation to make additional efforts in order to increase the levels of literacy, regardless of its type, in the Republic of Croatia, and that this basis and prerequisite for the functioning and progression in the modern knowledge society would truly encompass all individuals who live in this society.

INTERNATIONAL LITERACY DAY 2014

The Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult Education and University Computing Centre Srce this year jointly marked the International Literacy Day by organizing the round table discussion on "Lifelong Learning in a Virtual Environment."

Within the framework of the round table it was discussed about the importance of lifelong learning and the skills that the employees must have on the labour market today in order to be employable and competitive, and about the possibilities which are provided by information communication technology and e-learning in lifelong learning.

The round table was held on Monday, 8 September 2014 at the University Computing Center (Josipa Marohnića 5, Zagreb). The round table was moderated by Sandra Kučina Softić, Assistant Director for Education and User Support at the University Computing Centre, and was attended by representatives of state bodies, corporate environment, the academic community, the Agency for Vocational Education and Training and Adult

The panel took place on 9 September 2013 on the premises of the University Computing Centre (SRCE) in Zagreb.

The topic of the conversation was education and learning in penitentiaries, prisons and other correctional facilities. The intention was to give greater importance to this vulnerable group in our society from the perspective of education, during and after serving a prison sentence. This topic is especially important within the context of marking the European Year of Citizens. Problems which these persons face in terms of access to education and labour market were discussed at the forum.

Apart from that, the panel was an opportunity to bring together institutions that can contribute to the realization of better opportunities and providing information to this target group.

INTERNATIONAL LITERACY DAY 2012

The Agency and the Croatian Reading Association (the City of Zagreb and Zagreb County branch) jointly celebrated the International Literacy Day (8 September) by organizing a round table on promoting reading and literacy called “Through reading to literacy”.

On this occasion, the results of a big research project “Reading habits and information needs of the Croatian citizens” were presented.

Media announcements

It is important to emphasize that the media is one of the most important partners in the implementation of the campaign and without their help it would be impossible to reach the target groups, especially those at the local level.

Different marketing tools were used for promotional activities and their implementation taking into account which target groups the information is intended for.

The main task is, taking into account all the available opportunities, to reach the target public through the media and conduct actions that send positive and motivating messages towards the general public.

Communication activities would be aimed at the local, regional and national media, for the purpose of which the Agency has made the specific media and communication plans.

According to the fundamental classification, information is addressed to three target groups:

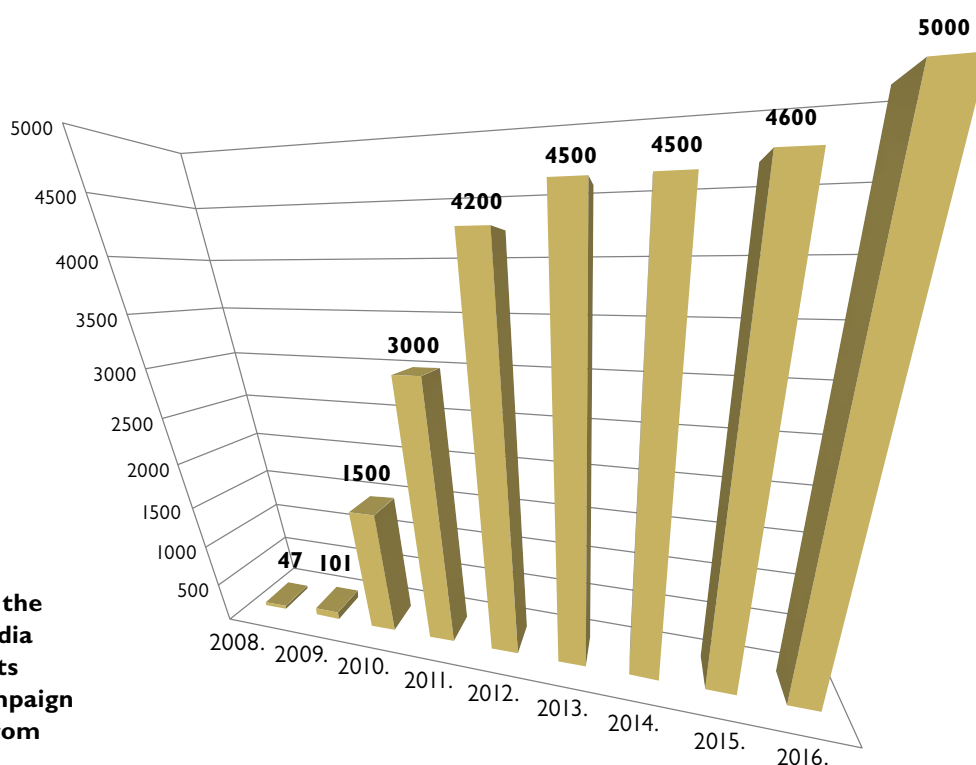

- the general public (the citizens of the Republic of Croatia)
- decision-makers - ministries, agencies, social partners, regional and local authorities, partner institutions and all interested stakeholders of the system for adult education
- the media.

THE MEDIA USED:

- television
- radio
- print media
- portals and websites
- social networks.

The media announcements were measured by making records of each announcement, regardless of its repetition.

Website and social networks

All information on the Lifelong Learning Week can be found on the website www.cjelozivotno-ucenje.hr. Beside registering events, it is also possible to search through all activities in the Republic of Croatia with a high-quality presentation of information, an overview of the activities through photo and video gallery, etc.

The primary objective is to reach out to different target groups and to promote learning and education on a daily basis.

Given the role and the importance of social networks in the global society, the Agency created a Facebook profile for the needs of following news and events in the framework of the Week 2011, and an Instagram profile in 2016.

The Facebook page Lifelong Learning Week (facebook.com/TjedanCjelozivotnogUcenja) was one of the main sources of information on all events. It contained regular posts on the activities of the projects and photos from all of the events, and visitors also had the opportunity of getting useful information on the upcoming events in the Republic of Croatia. The page has an increased number of visitors every month.
